BELLEFONTE CARPENTER INJURED IN ODD MANNER

W. H. Ott in Serious Condition Bur May Recover.

SKULL IS FRACTURED

William H. Ott, one of the well known carpenters of this section, is in the Bellefonte hospital in a serious condition as the result of a fracture at the base of the skull. His nose and face were also bruised painfully.

Mr. Ott had been helping in the construction work at the Pennsylvania Match Company plant, where a large new storage and shipping room is being erected. He was working on the first floor of the building on Saturday just after the noon hour, and other carpenters were engaged on both the first and second floors.

Unexpectedly and without warning a heavy stick of lumber, 5x6 in dimensions, and being put in place as a roof rafter, became loosened and fell. The one end held fast and this caused the timber to swerve as it fell. It struck the shoulder and arm of Frank Gardner, bruising him as it passed the second floor, and then struck Mr. Ott on the back of the head as it neared the first floor. It hit Mr. Ott with such force that he was hurled to the floor on his face and dazed. He spoke several times, saying "What hit me?" and then lapsed into unconsciousness. A physician was summoned and Mr. Ott was taken to the hospital where it is thought he will recover.

ALLEN HOY INJURED

Right Ankle Seriously Hurt in Fall From Tree.

Allen Hoy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hoy, of near Bellefonte, had his right ankle very seriously injured last week and was taken to the local hospital. An X-ray picture disclosed a serious fracture of his right ankle andon Monday he was taken to the Medico Chi hospital at Philadelphia.

The young man is completing a course in draughting at the Pennsylvania State College and was expecting to graduate with the class of 1924. Whether the injury will make this impossible cannot be determined at this time.

He was formerly located at Wilkinsburg, where for a number of years he had been employed at the Westinghouse Electric company and put in his spare time during evenings in attending night school until he gained enough instruction in draughting to make it possible for him to take a year's study at Penn State and graduate. On Wednesday evening he was picking apples to assist his father during the fall rush period on the farm. A big limb broke unexpectedly and he fell to the ground, resulting in the fracture and other injuries.

School Lad Has Arm Broken.

Kenneth Ulrich, eight year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Ulrich, of East High street, met with a very painful accident on last Thursday afternoon. In company with other lads, he was going to the Bishop street school. As they neared the school house, the boys were playing and jumping. Kenneth fell backward and his right arm was caught in such a manner that he sustained a compound fracture. The physician to whom he was taken ordered that he be removed to the local hospital where it was necessary to place him under ether before the fracture could be reduced. Reports from him now, we are glad to note, are promising and it is thought the fracture will heal in due time without complications.

Held for Flourishing Gun.

Three young men from Sugar valley—Melvin Bickel, Walter Heckel and George Kemmerer—were placed in the Lock Haven jail on Sunday evening to answer charges for alleged flourishing of revolvers. The young men motored to Lock Haven on Saturday night and stopped several motorists at various parts of the city, it is claimed, and then went to a house occupied by Neil Bowes and refused to depart until she summoned the police. Detective Myers went to Loganton, where one of the young men made statements which led to the arrest also of two others.

Auto Truck Damaged.

The Ford auto truck of Arthur Wilson, driven by Daniel Miller, of Bellefonte, was damaged about the front in a collision with a touring car as they passed on the Buffalo Run road west of Roopsburg on Friday afternoon. None of the occupants were injured.

TOURISTS SAVED FROM DROWNING BY POLE

Party From Shamokin in Accident at Spring Mills

CHILD SLIGHTLY INJURED

A party of tourists from Shamokin had a narrow escape from drowning in the dam at Spring Mills on Saturday afternoon. As it was, a child was injured but not seriously.

The party was motoring from Shamokin to Altoona. There were two men, a woman and child in the car. As they approached the bridge at the dam near the mill, the car struck a telephone pole. The driver lost control and the auto plunged from the road and was headed for the dam, where the water is so deep that there would have been little chance for escape from drowning. Fortunately, a telephone pole was lying along the bank and the car struck it and stopped.

The child was treated by Dr. Braucht and the car was taken to the Spring Mills garage for repairs. The party was taken to Altoona on Saturday evening in another car and remained until Monday afternoon, where they got their car from the garage as they were enroute to their home.

HALLOWE'EN CARNIVAL

Elks in Charge of Annual Affair; Proceeds for Hospital.

The annual Hallowe'en carnival at Bellefonte, under direction of the local lodge of Elks, will be given this year for the benefit of the hospital.

Voting for the Harvest Queen starts Oct. 15 and will close Oct. 30. Votes will be 1 cent each and can be procured from George W. Rees, who has charge of this contest.

The Mummers parade will be held on the evening of Oct. 31 and approximately $500 in cash and merchandise prizes will be awarded. At least 4 bands will be in line.

The Charity Ball will be held in the Armory. All organizations in the county are urged to take part in the parade and to help the committee make this the most successful carnival yet held as the proceeds are all to go to the hospital.

Women Will Hold Conference.

The Centre County Conference of Women's Clubs is highly favored in that Mrs. Olmstead, executive secretary of the "Women's International League for Peace and Freedom" will be the principal speaker on Oct. 27, in Philipsburg. A request is made of the many good friends of welfare work, who own automobiles, to kindly lend their service on the above date and please notify Mrs. R. S. Brouse of the fact. All who are interested in the activities in which women are engaged—whether members of organizations or not—are invited to attend this meeting.

Dog Without Owner Shot.

In a rather spirited hearing before Justice Kline Woodring, of Bellefonte, on Monday evening, no decision was made when Beryl Stover, of Coleville, claimed that a certain dog found at his place was not owned by him. Information had been made against Stover for harboring an unlicensed dog. As he claimed it was not his dog, Thomas Mosier, game protector, on Tuesday shot the dog.

Possibly the largest class initiation ever held in Central Pennsylvania by the P. O. S. of A. will take place in Sunbury on Columbus Day, Oct. 12 when between three and four hundred will receive the degree. A number of Centre Countians will attend.

Why We Should Vote the Straight Republican Ticket.

In just one month the voters of Centre County will go to the polls and select their several county officials who will serve during the next four years. It is of the utmost importance that the ones chosen shall be selected on the basis of qualification to administer the varied affairs of the county. On this basis the Republican party offers to the people of the county a group of men thoroughly capable to fill the offices to which they aspire. Every Republican nominee is well equipped to render efficient service. This undisputed fact, together with the vital issues involved with the election of a President next year, and the choosing of a Judge to succeed Judge Quigley, afford abundant reason why all Republicans should vote the straight Republican ticket on November 6th.

For the office of Sheriff the Republicans have nominated William H. Brown, and the Democratic candidate is E. R. Taylor. The latter's candidacy, if successful, means a revival of Taylorism in the politics of the county. This was attempted four years ago, only to be overwhelmingly rejected by the people of Centre County. All indications are that the people will on November 6th bury the scheme under an avalanche of votes of disapproval, and thereby end it for all time to come.

In the matter of qualification for the office of Sheriff, no one, we believe, will dispute the assertion that there is no comparison as between Brown and Taylor. Even by persons who are opposed to Brown politically it is frankly conceded that he has proved himself one of the most courteous, accommodating, efficient officials who has ever held office in the county. This, we appreciate, is a broad statement to make, but it is entirely justified by fact as well as by popular opinion. He is eminently fitted to administer the important duties of Sheriff, duties which require care and judgment of the highest order. We are most conservative, to say the least, when we assert that no matter how well fitted for some other things Taylor may happen to be, he is not qualified in temperament, experience and training to personally handle the many matters of a legal character with which a Sheriff must deal. This fact should be carefully weighed and considered by every voter.

Ignoring the question of qualification, there are some who advocate Taylor's election solely because as a soldier he was over-seas. The only difference between Taylor and Brown as soldiers was that Taylor was a member of the National Guard and as such was taken into the service and sent overseas, while Brown tried as a volunteer to get into the army and was rejected because of physical disability. Their relative positions might easily have been reversed, through no fault of either man. Had Brown been accepted for service and sent overseas, and Taylor been rejected and kept at home, would Taylor's friends now contend that Brown and not Taylor should be elected Sheriff, solely because of that fact? We will let them answer that for themselves. A fair illustration where the shoe is on the other foot is given in the contest between John Love, Republican, and Arthur Dale, Democrat, for District Attorney. Love served overseas, whereas Dale did not. Love's friends are advocating his election on the ground of qualification for the office, and not simply because he happened to be sent overseas, and Dale remained in the United States. The two cases offer a striking parallel, except that Brown did his best to get into the service.

For Prothonotary the Republican nominee is Roy Wilkinson, who is seeking his second term, to which he is entitled. We do not know how members of the bar will vote as between Mr. Wilkinson and Mr. Herr, his Democratic opponent, but we venture the prediction that many of them will cast their ballots for Wilkinson because he has been such an admirably competent official. With all due respect to his predecessors in that responsible office, we make the assertion, without fear of contradiction, that Centre County never has had a Prothonotary who has served with greater efficiency than has Mr. Wilkinson. This is the candid opinion of many persons having almost daily business to transact in that office, and the number includes Democrats as well as Republicans.

For County Commissioners the Republicans have renominated Harry P. Austin and Geo. H. Yarnell. Both won renomination in a field of four candidates. It was an open, above-board, clean cut contest, and having won fairly and honorably both should receive the hearty support of the party. They have demonstrated that they are exceptionably well qualified for the office, and this being true the Republican party owes it to them to be re-elected for a second term.

There could be no question as to the fitness of J. O. Heverly, for County Treasurer, likewise of Harry Rossman for Register, and Lloyd Stover, for Recorder. All three won their nominations after a hard fight. Had they been defeated they would have turned in for the success of their respective opponents. Having won, they ask, and should be accorded, loyal, energetic support by all Republicans at the polls.

Each day of the campaign witnesses a steadily growing wave of popular sentiment for the election of John Love, for District Attorney. He is a young man of ability, well grounded in the law, and will unquestionably prove himself an able prosecuting attorney. His Democratic opponent is Arthur Dale, until recently a Republican, who is attempting to demonstrate that he is bigger than his party. Mr. Dale became a Democrat because the Republican party did not nominate him over Mr. Love. He occupies the unenviable position of a man who has deserted his party in the hope of securing an office. The highways and byways are littered with the political corpses of men who thought they were bigger than their party, and unless all signs fail, Mr. Dale properly will take his place in this group when the vote is counted on the night of Nov. 6th.

Two veterans in the Republican service—Samuel B. Holter and Robert D. Musser—have been nominated for County Auditors. They are true-blue Republican war-horses—men who have stood by the party through thick and thin. They deserve and will no doubt receive a flattering vote of appreciation for the service they have rendered.

A Statement to the Voters of Centre County:—

In order that my position relative to law enforcement may not be further misconstrued, I desire to state to the voters of Centre County that if elected to the office of District Attorney I shall and will perform my full duty in the enforcement of all laws, State and Federal, conscientiously and honestly, to the utmost of my ability in the detection of violations of the law and in the prosecution of persons charged with such violations.

SNOW SHOE COAL MINER CUT THROAT WITH RAZOR

Ended His Life by Nearly Severing His Head.

CORONER HELD INQUEST

Peter Bennett, a Slavish miner employed by the Lehigh Valley Coal company since last spring, nearly severed his head when he ended his life by slashing his throat with a razor on last Thursday evening. The deceased had been acting strangely for some time and it was believed that something had affected his mind causing him to be demented at times.

Bennett was 24 years old and boarded with his sister and family, who reside near Snow Shoe and have a number of boarders. After eating supper last Thursday, he borrowed the razor from another boarder and went outside the house, immediately cutting his throat on the right side so deeply as to completely sever the jugular vein, carotid artery and windpipe. His struggles were alarming and those in the house lost no time in going to the yard to ascertain what had happened. His struggling was over by the time they reached his side and Undertaker Confer was called and took the body in charge.

Coroner W. R. Heaton, of Philipsburg, held an inquest and rendered a verdict of suicide. Not much was known of the young miner but it is said this was his third attempt at suicide, he having tried once to shoot himself and on another occasion to take poison. He was a single man and is survived by several brothers and sisters, in this country. Burial was made on Sunday afternoon in St. Michaels cemetery at Clarence.

SMALL GAME ABOUNDS THROUGHOUT COUNTY

Hunters Will Find Keen Sport, Declares Game Protector

TIMELY INFORMATION

Thomas Mosier, game protector, predicting good hunting this year, yesterday said:

"There is plenty of small game. There are wild turkeys and pheasants on the mountains near Nittany, Zion, Curtin, back of Pleasant Gap, in Brush valley and all the good hunting grounds. Rabbits are always plentiful. There are lots of deer, too, so that hunting should be very good."

Under the new game code hunters' licenses are required before hunting for birds or animals of any kind, except by persons residing upon and cultivating lands, who have the same privileges as heretofore. County treasurers are now issuing the 1923 hunters' licenses and tags in large numbers. A number of counties have issued more licenses than at this same date a year ago. This means either more licenses will be issued this year or else the sportsmen of the state are securing their licenses early, thus avoiding the rush and being sure their licenses are in their possession before they want to use them. The new "robin egg blue" tags are a big improvement over the tag used in 1922. The number issued in Centre County to County Treasurer L. Frank Mayes is 1,000. Applicants for licenses must now give their "occupation" instead of "complexion" as heretofore required. Boys under 16 years do not need licenses to trap for fur-bearing animals or vermin.

The open season and bag limits for game of all kinds in Pennsylvania, as governed by both the State and Federal laws, are given in detail on the back of every hunter's license, with additional information on various features of the new law.

Under the old law shooting or hunting between sunset and sunrise, except for raccoons, was specifically prohibited. The Legislature saw fit to extend the hours of shooting in the new game code, and under the new law it is legal to hunt for or kill wild turkeys only between sunrise and sunset, and all other kinds of game may be hunted for and killed from one half hour before sunrise until one-half hour before sunset. Raccoons may be hunted at any time during the night-time. The penalty for hunting during the night-time is now $25 for each offense instead of from $10 up to $200 as fixed by the old law.

EATS CAKE TO ESCAPE TAX

Irish Woman Thwarts Customs Collector Who Attempted to Confiscate Her Pastry.

The customs cordon between northern and southern Ireland is, of course, a great nuisance to people whose market town lies across the border, and the indignation of those making acquaintance with the law's vagaries for the first time sometimes leads to amusing incidents.

The other day a market woman was taking home in her basket a good solid "family" cake. On finding that the duty would amount to as much as the price of the cake itself she declined to pay.

"Refuse ye may," said the official, laying hands on the not uninviting looking confection, "but we confiscate the cake."

"That ye'll not," said she, and snatching the cake out of his hands she retired across the border, and, regardless of possible future consequences, proceeded, under the eyes of the disappointed official, to consume the cake to the last crumb. Then she calmly marched over the frontier with all the honors of war.—Milwaukee Journal.

Cities Destroyed by Earthquakes

Tokyo and Yokohama Hold Modern Record for Loss of Life —Messina Second.

Washington, D. C.—"The earthquake and fire that have destroyed Tokyo and Yokohama in large part seem to constitute the greatest calamity, measured by the reported loss of life, that has ever fallen on any of the great cities of the world," says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society. "But there is a long string of disasters resulting from earthquakes that have visited great cities in the past," continues the bulletin, "that are at least comparable, and that loomed big enough in the minds of the world at the time.

"The next greatest calamity of the sort in modern times was the earthquake that in 1908 shook a great slice of Messina, Sicily, into the sea and killed on both the Sicilian and Italian side of the straits more than 75,000 people. In this case fire played no important part in bringing about the destruction, practically all the deaths resulting from falling masonry or from drowning.

Lisbon Disaster Stood Out.

"The disaster which long stood out as the greatest and most destructive of recent centuries was the tidal wave which swept over the city of Lisbon, capital of Portugal, in 1755. The loss of life in that catastrophe was probably between 50,000 and 60,000.

"America's outstanding calamity to a large city resulting from an earthquake was the destruction of San Francisco in 1906. An earthquake severed the water supply lines, and when fire broke out immediately afterwards, it soon spread over practically the whole city. Although only about 700 people lost their lives, the property damage amounted to some $200,000,000.

"Charleston, S. C., is the only other city of importance in the United States that has suffered from an earthquake. In 1886 a severe quake shook down chimneys and houses in Charleston, but resulted in the loss of only 27 lives.

A Modern Sodom and Gomorrah.

"In the West Indies the most dramatic earthquake incident that has occurred was the slipping of a large part of old Port Royal, Jamaica, into the sea in 1692. This was in the days of the buccaneers, many of whom frequented Port Royal and gave it the name of one of the world's wickedest cities. The superstitious saw in the destruction of the town a modern version of the wiping out of Sodom and Gomorrah.

"The chief cities of Central America, excepting those of Honduras and Nicaragua, have repeatedly been destroyed by earthquakes since the advent of the Spaniards in the Sixteenth century. The principal sufferer has been Guatemala City, which has been practically destroyed more than a half dozen times, the latest calamity befalling it in 1917. But Guatemala has had no monopoly of disasters. San Salvador, capital of the republic of the same name, and Cartago, capital of Costa Rica, have been shaken into ruins on more than one occasion.

No Records of Ancient Quakes.

"The city which has suffered most greatly in South America is Valparaiso, Chile. Great damage was inflicted by earthquakes in 1730, 1822, 1839, 1873 and more recently in 1906. As early as 1586 earthquakes were bringing destruction to the Pacific coast of South America, Callao being destroyed in that year.

"The seeming lack of great earthquake calamities in ancient times may be due more to the absence of complete records than to the inexplicable escape of the great cities of the past. It is worthy of note, however, that because of the types of buildings in use, usually low and often with roofs of straw, no great loss of life would result normally even in congested centers.

Antioch Next to Tokyo in Loss.

"There was never any outstanding destruction in Rome as a result of earthquakes, so far as history shows; but Rome did have its quakes, and some students of history assert that the large number of Roman palaces and temples believed to have been destroyed by the barbarians between the Fifth and Ninth centuries were really shaken down by earth tremors.

"The earliest historic earthquake which caused a tremendous loss of life, and the most destructive, if the statistics can be accepted, save perhaps the recent quake in Japan, occurred in Antioch and nearby towns in Syria in 526 A. D. This was then a city of some half a million or more inhabitants, the capital of the East, and save Rome itself, probably the most important city of the Roman world. In addition to the residents of the city, large crowds were gathered for a Christian festival. The great convulsion that shook the city and the neighboring towns, and the fires that followed are said to have caused the death of more than 200,000 persons."

French Girl Wants Man From Montana

Paris.—The American A I society of Paris has received a curious commission from Mlle. Yvonne Jalla, who has a considerable fortune. According to a statement she has made to the society, she was engaged to an American lieutenant from Montana, who was killed in the war. As she cannot erase his memory, she is determined to marry none but a man from Montana.

The other conditions which she imposed in her communication to the society set forth that the candidate need not be handsome nor faithful to prohibition. As soon as the Aid society has succeeded in finding her a Montana husband she will in return pay the passage home of 15 destitute Americans stranded in France.

Author's Home Becomes Shrine

Cooper's Birthplace Purchased by Burlington County (N. J.) Historical Society.

Burlington, N. J.—The birthplace here of James Fenimore Cooper, first of American novelists, whose Leatherstocking Tales of early settlement life have been read the world around for the last century, has been purchased from private owners by the Burlington County Historical society, and will be reopened as an historic shrine on the one hundred and thirty-fourth anniversary of Cooper's birth.

Little known incidents in the life of Cooper have been brought out by the restoration of his birthplace, which has sheltered many different families since he was born there September 15, 1789. Few there are who knew that Cooper was a sailor before he was a writer.

It is a coincidence that he and Capt. James Lawrence were born next door to each other here on South High street, where both houses still stand in a good state of preservation. Lawrence was quite a boy when Cooper was born. Whether they ever met is conjecture suggested through a comparison of their biographies, which record that both Jameses served on the Wasp. The American navy was hardly big enough in those days to boast of two ships of the same name.

Lawrence entered the navy as a midshipman in 1793. Not so much is told of Cooper's naval career, but he commanded a gunboat for a time on Lake Champlain, while Lawrence commanded in succession the Argus, Vixen and Wasp. He was aboard the Wasp until 1811. Cooper had also been aboard a ship named Wasp for some time when he resigned from the navy in 1811, after his marriage, to gratify the wish of his wife that he remain on land.

Missed the War of 1812.

Thus it happened that James Fenimore Cooper just missed the War of 1812, in which James Lawrence won undying fame by giving the American navy its fighting motto, "Don't Give Up the Ship," uttered as his dying words as he was being carried from the deck of the Chespeake after being mortally wounded in a naval engagement with the British frigate Shannon on June 1, 1813.

Cooper blazed the way for American fiction writers, among whom he was the first "to extend the domain of fiction over the sea, the prairie and the forest." That he blazed the path well is shown by the fact that during thirty years he wrote 39 novels, besides other writings that never became public.

Was Son of a Quaker.

Much of his writing was done at Cooperstown, N. Y., whither his family had moved from Burlington when James was about a year old. He was the eleventh of twelve children, most of whom died in infancy. His father was a Quaker. The settlement around Cooperstown was in the wilderness along the upper reaches of the Susquehanna. There James in his boyhood saw much of wild life and of Indians and settlers to provide material for the thrilling books of adventure that he began to write in 1820. The first work to win him fame was "The Spy," written in 1821. The Leatherstocking Tales were started during that decade. Few young Americans there are who have not been thrilled in the reading of his "Pathfinder," "Deerslayer," "Last of the Mohicans," and others of the series.

The fame and later years of Cooper's life were clouded by his bitter clashes with his critics, in which the novelist wasted much of his time, energy and fortune, which, his biographers say, might better have been devoted to further literary attainments. He died at Cooperstown September 14, 1851, just the day before his sixty-second birthday.

To Restore Old Home.

The Cooper birthplace has long been cherished among the historical shrines of which Burlington has an unusual wealth. For a century it has been pointed out to visitors as one of the city's chief places of interest. It has remained under private ownership during that period, but owners and tenants have acceded to public sentiment and preserved the property through successive generations with the greatest care.

True, some of the modern tenants tore out the mantelpieces which were an adornment of the Colonial houses in Cooper's day. A more modern door was also provided when the old one wore out. The general appearance of the house, however, remains much as it was when the novelist was born there. The small panes in the windows alone are sufficient to distinguish it from present-day homes.

The Burlington County Historical society has also set about to restore some of the colonial features of the old house since it purchased the property. The committee directing this restoration is headed by Alice D'Olier, a sister of Colonel Franklin D'Olier, first national commander of the American Legion, and now director of the Sesquicentennial committee in Philadelphia. The historical society for years has had its quarters in the old library building on Union street, but with the completion of repairs to the Cooper house it will move its quarters to the novelist's birthplace, which is to be preserved as a public museum.

WHO'S WHO—and WHEREFORE

Royal Gossip That Interests America

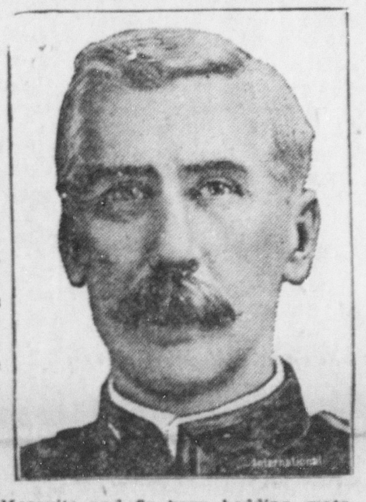
The Windsors of London are much in the public eye—King George and Queen Mary; the prince of Wales—beg pardon, Lord Renfrew—enjoying a vacation on his Canadian ranch; the duke of York, with his bride, understudying for Wales; Princess Mary, busy with the care of her young son.

And now comes Prince George, youngest son, just twenty-one, is setting the Londoners to talking. The gossips have it that he's going to be married. One set says his engagement is shortly to be announced to Lady Alexandra Curzon, youngest of the three daughters of the British foreign secretary.

The other set says that a marriage is being arranged between Prince George and Miss Grace Vanderbilt, daughter of General and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt of New York. The Vanderbilts, who took Brook House in Park Lane for the season, are remaining in England indefinitely. Grace has been welcomed to the royal circle. And she is a great heiress, as well as a pretty and clever girl. She and the prince have been much together.

Lady Alexandra's mother, Lord Curzon's first wife, was Mary Victoria Leiter, daughter of Levy Z. Leiter. He was one of the early "merchant princes" of Chicago and a partner of Marshall Field in the days when the firm was Field, Leiter & Co. Lady Alexandra is a niece of Joseph Leiter, whose disastrous attempt to corner wheat will never be forgotten in the Windy city.

U. S. Navy Gives Quick Aid to Japan



He who gives quickly gives best. Rear Admiral E. A. Anderson, commander in chief of the United States fleet in Asiatic waters, was one of the first to function effectively after the earthquake. The first direct message from Yokohama came from him to the United States Navy department; it reported the arrival of his flagship, the Huron, and gave information as to casualties. One of his first acts was to requisition supplies from Shanghai, ordering the first obtainable shipping board carrier to proceed at once to Yokohama. Provisions and medical supplies were carried early to Yokohama by American navy destroyers and delivered to the Japanese Red Cross. The supplies ordered from Shanghai included:

Nonperishable provisions—beans, flour, rice, tea, sugar, salt and water.

Medical and surgical supplies—Cotton, gauze, bandages, invalid foods, blankets, etc. Miscellaneous stores—Mosquito and fly bars, bedding, mats, tents, picks, shovels, tools, lumber, hardware, coffins.

Admiral Anderson was born in 1860 in North Carolina and is a graduate of the United States Naval academy. He wears the D. S. M. and Congressional Medal of Honor. He has been rear admiral since 1918.

Walton of Oklahoma Much in Limelight

Gov. John C. Walton of Oklahoma is much in the limelight these days. It was only a short time ago that he put Tulsa county under martial law. He announced a campaign to rid Oklahoma of mob violence and to bring to justice the persons responsible for the floggings that have been numerous. At first he named no names. Later it developed that the fight was between the state and the Ku Klux Klan. Still later Governor Walton put the whole state under martial law.

Then Representative Howard requested the United States War department to investigate the use of Oklahoma National Guard units in the enforcement of Gov. Walton's proclamation. Whereupon Secretary Weeks declared that a "declaration by a governor of a state of martial law, or that an insurrection against the government of the state exists, is a matter in which the War department cannot intervene." Governor Walton also attracted attention when he moved his legal residence to Muskogee and announced his candidacy for the United States senate.

Mrs. Vanderbilt Thrills Over Sarazen

Popular indeed is the turf these days; 1923 is probably the record year in American racing and now society women of wealth are entering the sport of kings. Mrs. Payne Whitney (Greentree stable) has developed a highly successful stable. Mrs. Raymond Baker, formerly Mrs. Alfred Gwynn Vanderbilt; Mrs. Marshall Field; Mrs. H. Carnegie Phipps, and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt II are the latest to join the ranks of owners.

Mrs. Vanderbilt (portrait herewith), who was Miss Virginia Fair, races under the name of the Fair stable. Her silks, which she personally selected, are black, salmon cross front and back, salmon sleeves and cap. She has two royally bred and expensive yearlings in her barn, and is in the market for both flat and cross-country racers.

It was Mrs. Vanderbilt who at Saratoga paid Col. Phil Chinn $30,000 for the unbeaten Sarazen, a two-year-old chestnut and gelding by Hightime-Rush Box, by Box. And at the fall Belmont park meeting Mrs. Vanderbilt had all kinds of thrills when her colors appeared for the first time in public on Sarazen. She was one of the first in the paddock before the race—with a pocketful of sugar. During the race she sat in her box in the Turf and Field club. She had Sande up—nothing is too good for Sarazen. Sarazen jumped out in front, staid there to the wire, ran the five and one-half furlongs in 1:05 and won as a 1-3 favorite should, with his proud owner making her way excitedly to the paddock to receive congratulations.

KNITTED SUITS AND FROCKS; SCARFS AND SHORT COATS

THOSE smart, loosely-knitted sports suits and dresses that were a joy to both wearers and beholders, during the summer, served to pave the way to success for their followers this fall. The new models have arrived in considerable numbers and in endless variety and no one welcomes them more fervently than the college girl. They are closely knitted and cozy, with wood shades, brown, beige, navy and tan leading in colors.

In the suits, coats are usually hip length and open at the front, fastening with buttons, but there are occasional side openings. The introduction of brushed wool in collars and trimmings makes opportunity for attractive color contrasts. Navy and beige, navy and red, blue and gray, brown and orange, tan and brown are combinations that are repeated in the display. Bandings of brushed wool appear on both coats and skirts, as shown in the illustration, where a very light gray wool trims a suit in a darker shade.

A distinctly smart note appears in suits in which the coats have an attached throw scarf instead of a collar. A navy blue suit, with the coat showing a faint pattern in red, is completed with a scarf of plain navy.

It goes without saying that the new crop of sweaters is the largest ever and offers anything that is likely to be called for—including some novelties. The sleeveless sweater of late summer with plain back and patterned front reappears with sleeves that are plain like the back. It is closely knitted.

Unless gentle woman transfers her affections from fox neckpieces to something else in fur scarfs the doom of Mr. Fox appears to be sealed. He will not be among those present much longer in the animal kingdom. But furriers assure us that all that glitters is not gold and all that looks like fox may be something else. Many little beasties contribute pelts that imitate, more or less closely, the long, soft, silky and immensely becoming fur of the fox, and among them are the plentiful hares.

The familiar neckpiece pictured may be safely pronounced the most popular thing in furs. Its vogue extends through summer and winter and it provides the finishing touch for suits, street dresses, afternoon and dinner costumes. Fur lends a touch of luxury and richness dear to the heart of women and it harmonizes with everything. "Platinum fox" is the name given to light colors, dyed to match the suits or dresses to be worn with them, and these scarfs are shown in gray, taupe, tan, sand, beige and colors of the same character. The "dyed-to-match" idea is quite sure to persist, but is only attractive in quiet or neutral colors.

Short coats have again come into style. The new models now being shown are made in box-coat and blouse effects, with standing or choker collars and a single fastening at the waistline. This fastening generally takes the form of a metallic buckle or clasp of galalith, in brilliant colors.

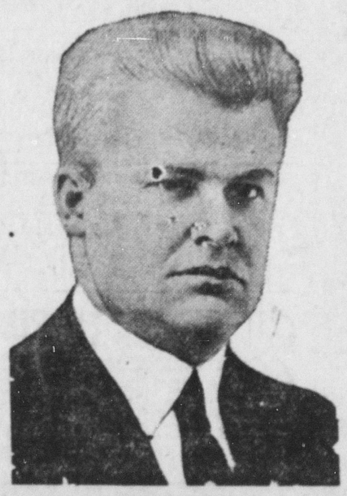
LEGION TO FATHER ORPHANS

Problem, One of Biggest Facing Organization, Regarded as Continued Service to Nation.

Caring for orphaned children of World war veterans is regarded as one of the principal problems in the American Legion's plan of continued service to the nation. Estimates show that within eleven years after the close of the war, there will be at least 35,000 of such children, and the number is expected to increase so rapidly that it will entail as much expenditure as does the relief of disabled soldiers.

George A. Withers of Clay Center, Kansas, is chairman of the Legion's national committee on children's homes. Mr. Withers has given unsparingly of his time during the past year in research and study of the conditions and methods used in the upbringing of veterans' dependents. The committee is composed of Mark T. McKee of Michigan, Charles French of New Hampshire, William B. Healey of Pennsylvania, G. A. Warlick of North Carolina, E. E. Hallenbeck of Pennsylvania, Ralph K. Robertson of New York, and A. H. McKnew of California. They have prepared an outline for the Legion's part in such a program, to be submitted to the fifth annual convention of the organization at San Francisco.



George A. Withers.

Exact procedure of the Legion is uncertain, and may not be determined until after the convention takes action. No approval has been given to any plans outlined because of the variance of opinions of child welfare workers on the feasibility of certain methods. Suggestions of placement of dependent children with near relatives, with financial aid in education; location with foster parents; grouping of the wards in small colonies under direction of matrons; and institutional care in orphanages will be included in the report of the committee. Further plans for education and vocational training will be outlined in the report.

Work of preparation has been assisted by responses to a questionnaire sent to heads of all Legion departments. It has been determined from these that at least six states already have provided specific care for those bereft of parents by the World war, and in other states plans looking to Legion co-operation as partial solution have been prepared. A project in Washington calls for establishment of an institution on public lands of the state, to be financed through efforts of the Legion. Michigan now has an orphanage, known as the American Legion Children's billet, under direction of the organization. Kansas is at work on a plan for acceptance of a gift from Daniel Dabney, who offered the Legion a large tract of land, and an endowment of $25,000 if the Legion would raise $100,000 for a home for dependent children of former service men.

Members of the committee believe that the care of such children is a responsibility for the Legion. In a recent letter, Chairman Withers has summed up the duty of the Legion men in these words:

"These youngsters belong to the buddies who stood with us in the trenches, and who were called upon to make the supreme sacrifice. Can we, who were spared, do less than to see to it that those nearest and dearest to those wonderful boys who gave their all, shall have the chance that we would desire for ours, had we been called on as were they?"

AIR DISARMAMENT BIG TOPIC

Question of International Importance to Be Discussed at Legion National Convention.

The question of an international air disarmament conference will be one of the principal topics for discussion at the American Legion's national convention in San Francisco, according to Legion national officials.

When the Legion started its poll of prominent citizens to ascertain public sentiment in regard to the advisability of holding a conference to limit military air forces in Washington, the question claimed the serious attention of Legionnaires in all departments and a number of state organizations have recommended that the national convention consider the issue.

The Legion believes that world peace is threatened by the unusual air programs sponsored by France, England, Italy and Russia. Led by France, the nations of Europe are involved in a race for air supremacy which the Legion feels may result in a necessity for appropriations of billions of dollars on the part of this country unless an international agreement is reached to reduce air forces.

Public sentiment favors the proposed conference, according to results obtained to date from the poll which elicited replies from members of congress, governors, editors, college presidents and many prominent citizens. Of the letters received, approximately 90 per cent express approval of the gathering.

Through the views of commentators runs a definite current of opinion that the conference should be held as soon as possible and that if it is not held, the United States should take steps at once to obtain thorough protection in air armament. Writers admit the difficulties of obtaining representation at the gathering because of the situation in Europe, but express the belief that the attempt should be made, thereby revealing to the world the nations refusing to co-operate in a movement for world peace.

Included in the list of commentators are a number of Americans whose words on questions of an international character always are sure of a respectful hearing. Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, chairman of the senate committee on foreign relations, who was one of the members of the American delegation to the Washington arms limitation conference of 1921, has expressed approval of the Legion's campaign in principle. He wrote that he favored limitations in aircraft similar to those made in naval strength, provided that the agreement for limitation is international.

Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, believes that the conference should be held at once because "the limitation of air armaments is the most important and vital possible limitation." However, he adds the thought that international protection must be afforded to the security of certain nations which, because of their inferior man-power, have been forced to rely upon their superior ingenuity in developing and producing the most modern and scientific agencies of war.

That the Legion's suggestion would have the support of the farm bloc is indicated in the enthusiastic letter received from Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas who has written that it has won his hearty indorsement. "It seems to me that an international conference would be very helpful toward bringing about an agreement which would end competition between nations for supremacy in the air—a policy which unquestionably is not only useless but a menace to the peace of the world," his letter reads. "You are correct when you say that now is the time to consider this matter. Delay will undoubtedly complicate the situation and make it more difficult to remove the menace."

Legion leaders have expressed gratification that President Coolidge favors the aims of the proposed conference, but disagree with his belief that the time is not ripe for convening the gathering and that this government should set an example by refraining from engaging in competitive building of aircraft.

"Our stand should be to find out for certain whether nations are ready to discuss limitation of air armament, and if they are not, begin immediately to strengthen our air forces, which are now not those of a first class power," Lemuel Bolles, Legion national adjutant, has stated. "The worst thing that could happen to the country today would be a move to disregard preparedness in the face of the European contest and for the Legion to permit such an interpretation to grow from its suggestion of limitation would be to repudiate our four-year record for preparedness."

The Legion's campaign has aroused much public comment and has been the subject of editorials in newspapers all over the country. It has become one of the leading measures in that organization's campaign for the advancement of world peace.

Essential to Profitable Farming

The Utility Express Truck $550 Chassis Only f. o. b. Flint, Mich.

Fits any Standard Truck Body

No business can succeed unless its product is profitably sold. Most farms have a fine production department but no sales department. They grow crops and stock bought by buyers who set the price.

One of the chief reasons for this unprofitable situation is the average farmer's poor facilities for moving his crops or stock to the place where he can sell or ship to the best advantage. Because of the time and expense of horse delivery millions of dollars worth of produce spoils annually on American farms. The saving of this waste would, in many cases, change a losing farm to a money-maker.

This low-priced, high-grade, reliable truck was designed as a money-saver and money-maker for farmers and business houses needing fast low-cost haulage of heavy or bulky goods. It fits any standard type of ton truck body. Ask any Chevrolet dealer for price of the style of body you require.

BOY IS GIVEN A NEW ARM

English Surgeons Perform Successful Operation of Bone Grafting in London.

Extraordinary instances of successful bone grafting were given by Sir William MacEwen, president of the Royal Society of Medicine, at its recent meeting in London.

One was the case of a boy whose humerus was entirely gone, and his mother wanted the arm amputated because she said it was worse than useless, as the boy "had to use the other arm to look after it."

Six wedges from six limbs of three different people were taken and introduced into the boy's arm. They all grew, and the boy got so well that he fought with another boy and broke the arm.—Westminster Gazette.

The greater part of the black licorice is derived from Spain, where it is made from the juice of the plant and mixed with starch to prevent it from melting in hot weather. The licorice plant is a shrub that attains a height of three feet, and it grows wild where its roots reach the water. It flourishes especially on the banks of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers. Since the valley of the Euphrates contained one of the earliest civilizations in the world, the probability is that licorice is about the oldest confection of all, and the taste which the boys and girls of today like so well was enjoyed by the youngsters of three thousand years ago.

Advising a Judge.

A chicken stealing case was before the court. The culprit pleaded guilty and was duly sentenced.

But the circumstances of the case had provoked the curiosity of the judge, so that he questioned the man as to how he had managed to take the chickens and carry them off right under the window of the owner's house, and that with a savage dog loose in the yard. But the thief was not anxious to explain.

"Hit wouldn't be no use, judge, to try to 'splain dis ting to you. Ef you was to try it you more'n likely would git yer hide full o' shot an' no chickens, nuther. Ef you want to engage in any rascality, jedge, you better stick to de bench, whar you am familiar."

A FOOL ACT

Motorists Laugh and Cross in Path of Train.

With the engine of the morning passenger train over the Lewisburg and Tyrone branch into Bellefonte on Saturday speeding toward the dangerous crossing at Rockview, the train in full sight for many rods and Engineer William McCollum, of Sunbury, blowing the whistle as a warning and then sounding the shrieking alarm whistle, two men laughed at death and drove their racing automobile over the crossing, the engine barely missing it.

It was a fool act such as the public has been warned against continually by advertising campaigns and posters placed in conspicuous places by the railroad company. The crossing is dangerous to drive over at an excessive rate of speed and the engineer said he believed the driver was making 40 miles an hour or better when he went over the tracks, the road being termed at this point as a "double—L" with sharp curves to the right and left, so it was remarkable the auto did not stop.

The names of the men were not learned and only half of their license number was secured before the locomotive had passed it so they will go by unrecognized, but surely fortunate they are still to be among the living. Such reckless racing with trains daily results in some fatal crossing accident and, contrary to a general idea, there is little hope of recovering from the railroad company when it is proven that the motorists have been negligent in exercising proper care.

Commenting on the incident, Engineer McCollum said, "In spite of my blowing the whistle and even the shrill alarm of warning, they raced on, both of them laughing as they paid no attention to the warning. Such things are hard on the engineer. Some time ago I ran into a team at the crossing, which can be plainly seen for a good distance, and then they tried to claim that I did not blow the whistle. Suppose, these fellows' car should have upset on the crossing—people should be more careful."

Examination for West Point.

Congressman William I. Swoope has been requested by the War Department to nominate a candidate for appointment to the United States Military Academy at West Point, and two alternates, in time to take the examination at the Academy on the first Tuesday in March, 1924. As there are quite a large number of applicants for this appointment, Mr. Swoope has requested the Civil Service Commission to hold an examination of the candidates at Clearfield, Pa., and they have fixed Saturday, October 27th, 1923, at nine o'clock in the morning, at the Clearfield High School, as the time and place for holding this examination. The examination will be on the same subjects on which the successful candidates will be examined when they apply for admission to the Academy. All candidates must be actual residents of the District, comprising Centre, Clearfield, Cameron and McKean counties, not under seventeen nor over twenty-two years on the date of admission to the Academy, not less than five feet four inches in height, and of good moral character. Full particulars in regard to this examination can be obtained by writing to Mr. Swoope, at Clearfield, Pa., and a letter from him will admit the candidate to the examination.

MORE TRAFFIC TO BELLEFONTE

P. R. R. Company Trying Out L. & T. Branch.

The past week there has been considerably more freight traffic passing over the L. & T. branch of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Officially, it is learned this alleviates congestion of traffic on the Bald Eagle valley, between Lock Haven and Milesburg. Unofficially, but a current topic of much interest, is that the plan is also to learn just how much of a train of empties can be taken from the Northumberland classification yards over the L. & T. to Oak Hall to ascertain if it would be good policy to build the long desired link to connect the Pennsy tracks running between Tyrone and Fairbrook with the L. & T. at Oak Hall.

This last topic has been brought up at intervals for years and, for some reasons never made public, has not been termed advisable. Recently, surveyors went over the proposed roadbed again and reported a 1% grade, very desirable for railroad service, could be laid from Oak Hall to Fairview, giving a shorter route from Sunbury and the east to Tyrone and the west, passing very closely to State College and planned to go through the Lytle farm. The cost, it is said, would be approximately $6 000,000. It would greatly boost State College as a town and real estate values would go higher than ever.

On Friday and Saturday evenings the large type locomotive used by the P. R. R. Co. in hauling heavy freight trains, was run over the road with success. The freight trains were composed of 80 add 85 freight cars, all empty steel hoppers for coal trade west of here. The train on Friday evening was manned by Joe Twitmire, engineer, of Sunbury, a son of W. T. Twitmire, of Bellefonte. Superintendent Russell, of Williamsport, was along on the trip. He has not made any public announcement as to what he thinks of the project.

A number of the older railroad men look at the proposition with considerable doubt. There is a very unusual grade to be made at Paddy mountain and the leaves are starting to fall. In another week or so the leaves make the rails slippery and it is said it would be impossible to haul a big train over them under such conditions. The rails when wet are also a drawback to making the trip and the rain on Friday evening, had it come before the train got by the Paddy mountain grade, very likely would have made it necessary to cut the train and leave some of the cars at Paddy mountain.

There is no doubt, however, the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. has a problem to solve with regard to heavy traffic and a single track in Bald Eagle valley. There is a general opinion current that the Bald Eagle valley railroad is the best paying railroad proposition in the country and the increased traffic leads to a belief that the idea is correct. Diverting traffic in empty cars from the Northumberland classification yards over the L. & T. branch to Bellefonte and via Milesburg to Tyrone will considerably relieve the traffic congestion between Milesburg and Lock Haven, but it does not help between Tyrone and Bellefonte. It is almost impossible to maintain passenger schedules on time with the single track crowded with freight trains and for several years there has been much said about putting double track sections through Bald Eagle valley. Nothing definite has yet been announced on this policy, however, as it entails considerable expense that would not be necessary perhaps if the connecting link were put in between Oak Hall and Fairview.

The tests to determine whether or not it will be advisible to establish a route between Northumberland and Tyrone will be carried on for some time so trains can be hauled under all conditions and correct, reliable data compiled for study and reference. In the meantime, the largest freight trains ever taken over the Lewisburg and Tyrone branch will travel this way, passing through Bellefonte. Loaded trains, west to east, will probably never materialize, however, as it was officially learned the grade from Bellefonte to Dale Summit, is not practical.

Some delay was experienced on Saturday evening when one of the heavy locomotives proved too much for the tracks and a rail was broken near Coburn. A wreck train and crew soon had it repaired, however, and the test trips again were started.

3,206 PENN STATE STUDENTS

Engineering, Liberal Arts and Agriculture Popular Courses

All expectations were passed in the student enrollments at the Pennsylvania State College for this fall, according to attendance figures just announced. There are 3206 young men and women students about the same as last year, despite the fact that the freshman class was held to a lower limit this year.

Fewer second year students than usual have dropped out this year, and many new students entering with advanced standing bring the college enrollment to its utmost capacity.

There are 514 seniors at Penn State this year: 678 juniors, 893 sophomores and 1012 freshmen. There are 109 students in the two-year course in agriculture.

We Are A Thrifty People

There are 26,000,000 people in the United States who have saving accounts. They have saved and own, the vast sum of $17,300,000,000, an average of $665 each.

Does this money belong to the rich? Oh no. Most of these people are in very moderate circumstances—many of them are poor; But they realize that it is better to practice a little self denial now, than to suffer and possibly be humiliated later on.

ARE YOU ONE OF THESE WISE ONES?

OVER THE COUNTY

S. J. McMullin and G. R. Robb, of Millheim, while driving over the mountain from Nittany, after a trip to Lock Haven, saw a blacksnake lying in the road. They steered a wheel over it and killed the reptile, which measured 5 feet in length.

John D. Homan, one of the successful farmers of big scale in Penn's valley, has decided to leave the place on which he has prospered the past eleven years and will move onto his other property, containing about twenty acres, near Centre Hall borough, next spring. Labor shortage is given as Mr. Homan's reason for quitting the big farm.

The state road workmen employed in putting into first class shape the main highway between Bellefonte and Lewistown are working overtime and hustling to get the road work completed. The finished stretch of road will mean good driving over one of the finest scenic routes in the beautiful Keystone state. Work is being rushed in both Centre and Mifflin counties. It will bring increased tourist travel to Bellefonte and Lewistown when this stretch of road is finished as the work is of a substantial character and the highway is being considerably improved by widening of the road in a number of the dangerous places.

If the movie camera men could be on hand when motorists get up speed and accidentally hit some of the "Go slow" spots of Centre County roads, they would certainly get some real "stuff" for the fans. One of the thrillers was staged recently on a Sunday evening, but it would be unfair to say it was due to speeding. Fred Snyder and Boyd Musser were in the latter's car, a built over Ford, and intended to drive to Lewisburg. At Coburn, in backing to make a turn at a bridge, the wheels on one side of the car went over the edge of the bridge and the Ford turned a somersault and landed on its side in the stream. The young men were fortunate in escaping serious injury.

Millheim High School students are required to hike 150 miles during the first semester to win the letter M. Miss Mae Hosterman and Miss Bernardine Reifsnyder got a good start by hiking to Pleasant Gap, covering 17 miles, but it made them tired and they returned by the more agreeable method, via automobile.

One of J. W. Winkleblech's pretty sorrel horses is off duty at the farm near Millheim. The animal stepped on a corn stubble while corn fodder was being hauled from the field and the stubble broke off with a part of it remaining in the foot. It caused the animal to go lame and in several days a veterinarian was called. He cut away the entire frog from the horse's foot and the animal seems to be getting along well but it will be weeks before it can be used again.

Jacob and Franklin Sharer, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Sharer, of Centre Hall, were hunting ground-hogs on the Sharer farm when the mother of the boys wished to summon them for dinner and rang the farm dinner bell. The boys thought something unusual had happened at home and started in haste to return. While running, the younger one fell and the gun he was carrying was discharged, the shot striking the older brother in the leg. The injury is being treated by a local physician and nothing serious is anticipated.

Millheim now looks askance at all gypsy bands, so when a group of them went to encamp at the Pike school house, near the town, residents informed Ira Gramley and asked that the "gyps" be forced to move away. They argued with the constable when he appeared to instruct them gypsy parties would not be tolerated and pleaded for time to cook supper, alleging one of the party was a woman of 110 years. No arguments could move Constable Gramley, however, as the band, which had previously stopped and proved so troublesome, has not been forgotten.

Efficiency in Hades.

Interesting, both in humor and satire, is "Efficiency in Hades," by Robert B. Vale, which is just off the press and which has had such a remarkable sale to date as to indicate that the book will become a "first seller." Mr. Vale, regarded as among the leading satirists and humorists in the country, has fairly outdone himself in his latest book. Taking up the subject of efficiency, which has been applied with such endless red tape and burdensome detail by not a few as to defeat the object aimed at, Mr. Vale conceived the idea of trying out the matter in Hades. A young engineer who, unexpectedly or otherwise, lands in Hades, is instantly impressed with the fact that things generally there are run in a haphazard, old-fashioned manner and promptly proceeds to volunteer to install and develop a really modern system to promote up-to-date efficiency. He is given the opportunity to introduce efficiency ideas of the modern era, and needless to say that with the enthusiasm of youth, and considerable conceit, he goes about that undertaking with such zest as to turn things upside down and, as one might aptly remark, make it a "hell of a place." The book abounds in rich humor and affords delightful entertainment to the reader.

Mrs. Mary Wright Dead.

PLAN FOR MANY VISITORS

State College Already Arranging for Entertaining 15,000.

State College, a town which normally boasts a population of less than 3500, is making preparations to entertain a visiting crowd of five times its size. The occasion is the annual Alumni Homecoming Day celebration at the Pennsylvania State College on Saturday, October 20.

There will be room for 20,000 people at the Penn State-Navy football game at State College on that day, this event being the chief attraction. Upwards of fifteen thousand of the crowd will be from outside the town and campus, and the problem of housing and feeding is a big one with town and college people at this early date. It is said that all hotel space is already reserved in Bellefonte, the nearest sizable town, and a special alumni committee on housing is facing the situation.

Fraternities, boarding and rooming houses will have to care for the bulk of the crowd which will be largely steg, including hundreds of alumni and former students coming back for the big reunion day. This is the fourth annual home coming for graduates and the occasion is now one of the greatest events on the college calendar.

Prisoners for Rockview.

A car load of prisoners, 55 in number, was taken from Pittsburgh to Rockview on Tuesday, being transferred from the Lehigh to the L. & T. in Bellefonte at 1:30.

Merchants and Farmers build and own Railroads

The Hall Mark of Service

Samuel Harden Church, President of the Carnegie Institute, in a recent statement, says:

"The railroads were not built by railroad men, and they are not owned by railroad men. They were built by the merchants and farmers of the United States, and they are now owned indirectly by all the people of the United States.

"The whole splendid system of railroads as it exists today was built with capital, energy and the brains furnished by American business men and American farmers with the high purpose of developing the commercial and agricultural interests of the country.

"Every one knows that as soon as the iron horse drew his shadow across the land the farms which the Government could scarcely give away suddenly jumped in value to fifty or a hundred dollars an acre, because the railroads had supplied them with the means of development, production and distribution.

"When the railroads are making plenty of money every shop is humming a song of happiness and every farm is growing rich."

THE RAILROADS OWNED BY ALL THE PEOPLE

merit the support, friendship and cooperative interest of the people—Hostility to your own property, either by legislation or individual act, does not accord with self-interest or the good judgment and common sense, so characteristic of American citizenship.

WEAK, RUN DOWN AND AILING

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Brought Relief When Other Medicines Failed

Winston-Salem, N. C.—"I was weak and run-down and had trouble with my side. I had been taking medicine for a long time and nothing seemed to do me any good. My husband went to the drug store and he said to the clerk, 'I want the best medicine you have for women's troubles.' He gave him a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has helped me. In a short time I was able to do my housework, and now I am not only able to do every bit of that and washing and ironing, but I help my husband at the store and feel good all the time."—Mrs. L. K. MYERS, 1409 E. 14th St., Winston-Salem, N. C.

Just the Man Wanted.

His son was a graduate of a financial school in the Middle West, he was in New York on other business and he dropped into a bucketshop a few months ago to see about getting the young man a position.

"I think he could write those market letters that you mail me," said the father rather doubtfully, after explaining the scope of the young man's accomplishments.

"Yes?" inquired the office manager, hopefully.

Further encouraged, the father continued: "I'm sure he could. There's just one thing you'd have to watch him for. He's likely to change his mind every few minutes."

"Every few minutes!" exclaimed the office manager. "An invaluable man! Tell him to call on me!"—Wall Street Journal.

GERRY SHOWS HOW

By JANE JORDAN

(©, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

GERRY went back and sat down by the pool where fountains played. She was much discouraged and altogether disappointed.

Barry, her sweetheart from schooltime days, was able to drive out to the White Farms each Saturday evening, and also to later drive his adored Gerry along the shore, in enchanted moonlight. Therefore, Barry was astounded, and disappointed in her decision. "Not going to White Farms?" he had asked amazed. Gerry fidgeted, but the truth came out.

"I want to know different people, Barry. Don't you understand? One makes one's friends and may one not cultivate prosperous friends as well as the ordinary? I'm going to stop for two or three weeks, if my money lasts, at the Hill Top house in the mountains, where Gwendolin Thayer spends her summers.

"Gwendolin Thayer!" Barry's tone was sarcastic. "So you are going to try to climb up to the haughty Gwen's position—in society. Why, dear child—" he dropped into the provokingly indulgent "Gwendolin's father has the money to buy her way. You can't get by among those Hill Top snobs—with an ingratiating smile."

Beyond the pool where Gerry sat, screened by sheltering trees, stood an invalid chair. Gerry had noticed this wheel chair and its bent and wrinkled occupant before. And she had conquered the impulse which urged her to speak to the lone old lady.

Gerry approached. "The sun shines through the leaves on your face," she said, and smiled her winsome smile. "May I push your chair—so?"

"Thank you, my dear." Here was a tone natural in its cordiality.

"You seem to be as alone, as I, in this gay resort. Loneliness may be expected by a sick old woman—but when one is young and—" the thin lips smiled, "and as good looking as you, my dear—why, loneliness is a crime. I have seen you day after day—tell me about it."

And to her own astonishment, Gerry obeyed the sympathetic request. She told of the determined trip to the mountains—of Barry and his discouragement—of the White Farms where she had been simply happy. Of the home, too, which death had severed, of her new departure then into the business world—of the painstaking saving for—this! Gerry told it all; and the sharp glancing eyes of her listener drew her on and on. The wrinkled smile came again:

"And you hate to have Barry—the satisfied rascal—say 'I told you so.' I've never relished that sort of thing myself. Always liked to show 'em, too, my dear. And I have, a few times. Even since I've come to this. Surprising folks in a pleasing way is one of the few joys left me. This—" the invalid waved her hands across her prostrate form, "came of an automobile accident. And I'll not walk the rest of my days. I'm for staying comfortably at home, with a kind soul or two to care for me, but my son—and oh! he's a good son; he won't hear of it. So, when he has a business trip, like the one which brought him here, he brings me with him. Thinks the change of air does me good. My dear, are you to miss the fete this evening—a moonlight fantasy, with garlanded box seats on the lawn? The boxes cost enough, goodness knows. How the rich can spend!—and are no happier. But you, little Cinderella, are you to be alone, back among the trees—as usual?"

"I am to be alone," Gerry answered, and added, "unless you will let me keep you company."

"Thank you. That's kind again. But my son will be here and will be insisting that I let him draw my chair to a garlanded box to watch the tableaux. And as I'm a determined old woman I'll tell you what I'm going to have him do. I am going to ask him, as my special desire, to take you instead—so get out your prettiest dress. Warring is not a young man, but he's a handsome one. He is devoted to his work and finds no time for society of women. Some of them would seek it—you know of Miss Gwendolin Thayer? She would have had my son a guest tonight in their family box."

Gerry leaned forward; her soft laughter rippled. "Your son? I do not even know his name," she said.

"You will when you hear it," the elder woman answered dryly. "My son is Warring Webster, the sculptor. He is here in consultation. Warring is now at work on the Victory statue of the high mountain."

A man came smiling and bowing his way through the assembled guests on the lawn. He was a handsome man as his mother had said, and his eyes bright, glancing like hers, rested on Gerry's face.

"My little new friend, Warring," the old lady introduced her.

The fete was a beautiful achievement. Gerry remembered it long years after.

Barry, sitting in his dusty office, read the newspaper account next day.

"In box No. 1, Warring Webster, sculptor and well-known financier; Miss Geraldine Drew of Conover Town, his companion."

Barry's chair came to the floor with a jolt; he turned to the surprised friend who sat near him:

"I'm going to catch the 6:15 for Hill Top," said Barry, "and fetch that girl home."

New Battleship Must Make Name

Colorado, Third of Same Name, Has Reputation to Maintain—All Others Made History.

Washington.—The Colorado, third of a line of similarly named fighting ships of Uncle Sam's navy, was commissioned recently.

The Colorado is a super-dreadnaught of 32,000 tons trial displacement, 28,000 horsepower, 21 knots speed, and eight 16-inch guns in her main battery. She is 624 feet long, 97½ feet beam and about 31 feet in draft of water. Her complement comprises 69 officers, 1,266 naval enlisted men and 75 marines. The Colorado, the West Virginia, likewise nearing completion, and the Maryland, commissioned in 1921, three sister ships, are the most powerful and modern battleships in the world.

Third of Its Name.

The new battleship Colorado is the third ship in the American navy to bear that name. The first, named for the Colorado river, was a wooden steam frigate of 3,400 tons displacement, mounting 40 guns, launched at the Norfolk navy yard on June 10, 1856. She was one of the larger vessels of her time in our navy, corresponding to the intermediate or 50-gun ship of the days before steam and to the armored or battle cruiser of later periods. Like others of her type, she was a full-rigged ship, ordinarily making sea passages under sail alone. As the single screw propeller would then be a drag, it was fitted to uncouple and be lifted clear of the water.

First Used in Blockade.

Colorado I. first saw war service as flagship of Commodore William Marvine in establishing the blockade of the Gulf of Mexico coast, from Key West to the Rio Grande. In September, 1861, while she lay outside Pensacola, the Confederate privateer schooner Judah was fitting out at the navy yard, which has been surrendered to the Confederates. The Commodore decided to destroy her. A boat expedition from the Colorado, of 100 men under Lieut. (afterwards Rear Admiral) John H. Russell, made its way in during darkness, arriving near the schooner before being discovered. The Judah had a full crew on board, three of her guns were in place, two guns mounted on shore could sweep her decks, and several hundred men were near at hand for her protection; yet in spite of determined opposition, the Colorado's party were entirely successful.

Too Deep for Farragut.

Admiral Farragut wanted the Colorado for his attack on the forts below New Orleans in April, 1862, but her 22 feet draft was much too deep to cross the Mississippi bar, and it proved impossible to lighten her enough to get her into the river. She was accordingly employed in subsidiary operations off South West Pass. In the gunboat Cayuga secured alongside the Pensacola, Captain Bailey led the column in the run by the forts. Afterward he was sent to land at New Orleans, and, accompained only by Lieut. George Hamilton Perkins, made his way through streets crowded by an excited, jostling, threatening mob, to the city hall to demand the surrender of the city. Later the Colorado became flagship of Commodore H. K. Thatcher in the North Atlantic Blockading Squadron, and was engaged actively in the attack and capture of Fort Fisher, N. C., on December 24-25, 1865, and January 13-15, 1865.

Served as Flagship.

After the Civil war the Colorado I. served as flagship on various stations, including the Asiatic. The rulers of Corea did not then admit foreigners into their country, and sometimes unauthorized visitors and distressed mariners were treated with harshness by the Corean natives and local officials. Such an incident took the Colorado there in 1871, bearing the flag of Rear Admiral John Rodgers, accompanied by four others of the squadron. Inaccessibility of the Corean authorities and evidence of cruelty on the part of the natives led to a punitive attack on the principal fort in the Han river. The Colorado's crew furnished an important part of the landing force, under Lieut. Commander (afterward Rear Admiral) Silas Casey, the executive officer. From Admiral Schroeder's description:

Crew First in the Charge.

"When Lieutenant Commander Casey of the infantry gave the order to charge, they rushed forward down the slope and up the opposite hill with splendid dash and courage.

"Lieut. Hugh McKee of the Colorado was the first to mount the parapet and the first to leap into a hand-to-hand conflict, in which he fell at the head of his men. The fighting inside the fort was desperate. The Corean's code did not conceive of any quarter being either given or taken, and they fought hopelessly to the last man."

Two others were killed and ten wounded in the attacking party.

Sold as Junk in 1832.

This incident, not uncommon in that time and region, did not affect the generally friendly attitude of the United States toward Corea nor cause any hostile feeling on the latter's part, for after eight years of persistent endeavor, Commodore R. W. Shufeldt, U. S. N., succeeded, where other similar attempts since 1832 had failed, in obtaining a treaty with Corea, of peace, amity, commerce and navigation, which opened Corea to foreign intercourse. Thus again, as in our Commodore Perry's treaty with Japan, a naval officer "added another to the peaceful successes of American diplomacy in the Far East," as commented by a leading London journal of the time.

The remaining years of the Colorado I, 1875-84, were spent as receiving ship at the New York navy yard. On February 14, 1885, 31 years after the laying of her keel, she was sold, to the usual fate of being broken up and burned for her copper fastenings and other salvage material.

Second Launched in 1902.

Meantime the Territory of Colorado, organized as such in 1861, had been admitted on August 1, 1876, into the Union as a state, and gave its name to the second man-of-war Colorado. She was one of six armored cruisers authorized, three at a time, by congress in 1899 and 1900, of 13,680 tons displacement, carrying four 8-inch guns in two turrets, 14 6-inch, a score of smaller caliber, and two underwater torpedo tubes. Her Niclausse boilers and four-cylinder, triple expansion engines driving twin screws, developing 27,000 horsepower, atttained a maximum speed of over 22 knots. Her ship's company numbered 910. She was launched at Cramp's Shipyard, Philadelphia, on April 5, 1902, under the sponsorship of the daughter of Governor Peabody. A handsome silver service was presented by the state, which is now in the new ship.

Transport in World War.

The Colorado II became one of the "armored cruiser squadron," first commanded by Rear Admiral Willard H. Brownson, an organization famous and popular in our navy in its day, with a good record for cruising. President Roosevelt once witnessed target practice on board and took dinner with the crew in the general mess, giving his signed photograph as a souvenir. In 1915 the Colorado II became flagship of the Pacific reserve fleet and on December 1, 1916, her name was changed to Pueblo, after the second city in Colorado, as a larger vessel was to bear the name of the state. Under this name she served in the cruiser and transport force in the World war under Capt. G. W. Williams, escorting transports across, and after the armistice bringing 10,136 troops home. In 1921 she became the receiving ship at New York, pending further active employment.

Third Has Eight Large Guns.

The third Colorado was designated as battleship No. 45 (counting from the first in our new navy), authorized in the building program of August 29, 1916, to be of 32,600 tons trial displacement, eight 16-inch guns in four center-line turrets, twelve 5-inch guns for torpedo defense, eight anti-aircraft guns, and two torpedo tubes. Her main machinery is designed to attain 21 knots with about 28,000 horsepower, two main turbine generators of Westinghouse type driving motors on four shafts, one screw on each. She is armored on the waterline, turrets, conning tower and smoke uptakes. She uses only oil fuel and her steering engine, anchor windlass and most other auxiliary machinery are electric-driven. She will mount a catapult for launching airplanes and generally have all improvements of the best naval practice. Her keel was laid May 29, 1919, at the New York Shipbuilding corporation's yard at Camden, N. J., and on March 22, 1921, she was launched.

Made Town's Fool, Sues for Damages

San Antonio, Tex.—Ascension Zozano is suing the order of De Amigos Del Puebla for $10,000, charging that his reputation and peace have been ruined.

Zozano alleges that he was made a "town fool" and "jestee" during a recent celebration anniversary by the order. He relates how a magnificent automobile and committee came to his home and met him and how its arrival at the meeting place of the order was heralded by trumpets. Beautiful maidens threw armfuls of flowers in his path as he alighted from the automobile.

In conclusion, he asserts that he found out later that all of this was merely to make a fool of him.

Seven U. S. Warships to Be Sent to the Junk Pile

Philadelphia.—Seven war vessels at the Philadelphia navy yard are to be scrapped under the provisions of the treaty for the limitation of armaments, recently approved. They include two cruisers and five battleships.

The cruisers are the Constitution and the United States, which had been under construction at the navy yard for some time. They are to be scrapped at once. A little later, workmen will start on the five battleships consigned to the international junk heap. Four of them, the Minnesota, South Carolina, Michigan and New Hampshire, are out of commission. The fifth, the South Carolina, will be taken to sea and sunk in tests of various deck and under-water attacking methods lately devised by Navy department engineers.

An eighth battleship, the Washington, under construction at Camden, N. J., also will be shattered by the gunfire and torpedo attack of the Atlantic fleet.

South American Eels Generate Electricity

New York.—Radio fans who have trouble keeping their sets equipped with fresh batteries, might find a solution in a tank of water and a first-class South American eel.

Delicate electrical recording instruments are being shipped from an electric plant to be used in determining the nature and the strength of the electric current generated by the recently acquired electric eel at the Bronx zoo.

John Toomey, head keeper, and several of his associates can testify that the latest arrival from South America has a kick, but in terms of voltage they are unable to express themselves. All Mr. Toomey knows is that he was floored twice by the current generated by the five and a half-foot eel and that whenever he goes near the cage now he wears nonconducting gloves.

George Fielding, a technical electrician, made some experiments and by placing a copper wire in the tank until it came in contact with the eel the recording instrument registered 15 volts on one occasion and 5 volts on another.

FINAL COURT PROCEEDINGS

Farm Title Decision Given in Interesting Case.

In the case of Mary G. Gates vs J. M. Keichline, an ejectment awarded by the court involving the title to a farm in Ferguson Township, the decision was made in favor of J. M. Keichline.

In 1894 Wilson Gardner, the husband of Sarah Gardner (mother of the plaintiff), was sold out by the sheriff and the farm purchased by this defendant subject to the liens of judgments and mortgages against it. The sheriff's deed was subsequently recorded but the defendant and his wife allowed to continue to remain on the farm, and the husband departing this life a few years later the wife, Sarah Gardner, continued to occupy the farm, although rented to others from that time to the year 1922, and in many respects Mrs. Gardner allowed to handle the farm as though it was her own, but the leases made between Mr. Keichline and the tenant.

The legal title to the farm by virtue of the aforesaid sheriff's sale is in the defendant and subsequent to the death of Mrs. Gardner her heirs made a deed for their right, title and interest in the farm to their sister Mary C. Gates, who brought this action, contending that the manner in which the sheriff's sale was held, the occupancy of the premises, the exercise in some respects by Mrs. Gardner as being the owner, and the defendant having kept an account, charges and credits, that these circumstances created under the law a result in trust. The defendant, however, denying that it created a result in trust and that Mrs. Gardner owed him a large sum of money and that the farm belonged to the defendant. Verdict on Friday forenoon in favor of the plaintiff.

Other civil cases were disposed of as follows:

William P. Bell, Jr., vs. D. R. Wilson, trespass; was continued on Wednesday at the cost of the defendant.

J. M. Keichline vs. W. G. Gardner, assumpsit, continued.

Harper and Turner vs. H. J. O'Brien, settled.

George H. Emerick, use of H. S. Brauchi; feigned issue, continued and to be placed at the head of the December Court civil list of cases for trial.

COUNCIL MEETING

Won't Recommend Electric "Silent Policemen" for Town.

The regular meeting of Council was held on Monday evening. The various committee reports were heard from which the following notes are gleaned:

John Dubbs paid $10 for repairs to the damaged railing near the Keichline confectionery store.

The fire and police committee have been urged by salesmen to place electrically operated "Silent Policemen" at important street corners, but refused to recommend any change.

After discussing a recommendation to replace the wood steps on Halfmoon Hill with concrete steps, the matter was referred to the street committee to confer with the solicitor and with Haupt & Brown.

Regarding the matter of caring for street water on Lamb St. at the High School building, there was considerable discussion and it was decided to have the street committee consult the solicitor and plan with the school board and attorney for co-operation in making some arrangement that would be mutually satisfactory.

The clerk was also authorized to notify the Tyrone Council body that the treasurer of the Pruner orphanage fund must secure a bond and, if Tyrone Council does not act within a reasonable time, other methods will be followed.

The blocking of the street in front of the Scenic on big picture nights was also brought before Council, but no definite action was taken.

It was stated the town will soon be properly posted with street and direction signs to prevent confusion of tourists that has been noted for some time.
